BIO

Matthew Sorge is a medium, firefighter, and veteran paranormal researcher with more than twenty years of investigative experience. As a published author and award-winning filmmaker, he is known for blending real-world emergency-service discipline with deep spiritual sensitivity and a lifelong commitment to exploring the unexplained. His work spans documented hauntings, occult practices, and high-intensity field investigations, culminating in his debut feature documentary, Field of Fears: The Haunting of Randolph County Asylum, which has earned international recognition and industry awards. Through Shadow Work Productions, Matthew continues to create compelling, authentic stories that bridge the worlds of the supernatural, human experience, and grounded investigative practice.

CURRENT PROJECT

Field of Fears is a raw, atmospheric documentary capturing a four-year investigation inside the notoriously haunted Randolph County Asylum. Led by filmmaker and veteran researcher Matthew Sorge, the team documents undeniable activity; voices, shadows, physical contact. While uncovering the asylum's tragic past. Blending disciplined methodology with authentic, chilling encounters, the film delivers an unfiltered look into real paranormal fieldwork and the lingering stories that refuse to be forgotten.
